Rush Reinforcements to American Outposts to Prevent Federals or Mutneers Attacking U. S. Soldiers.

Washington, July 8. - A battle is raging outside the American outposts at Vera Cruz between Mexican Federal soldiers and mutineers, according to a dispatch to the war department from General Funston.

Artillery firing is going on and General Funston's troops in the city have been rushed to the outskirts to repulse any attack on the American forces.

A large force of Mexican Federal troops facing the American line outside of Vera Cruz have mutinied against General Pena, the Huerta commander, and have threatened to attack General Funston's outpost.

This fact was set forth in earlier dispatches from General Funston to the war department.

The American commander also re ported that General Pena had inform ed him of the uprising and of the threat of the muitneers to attack the American lines. If an attack should be made, in view of the Mexican commander's action in notifying General Funston, it would not be regarded as an attack under orders."

"General Pena informed me that a considerable number of his troops had mutinied and threatened to attack the American outposts," said Funston's message to Secretary Garrison. "I have taken precautions by strengthening the outposts and have notified General Pena that I will not consider this a hostile act by his orders."

It is declared that Carranza has taken action that is certain to make the breach between the Constitution alist leaders wider than ever.

Three orders reported issued by the "first chief" threaten to throw the whole situation into chaos. The first and most important, according to a confidential agent of Carranza, is an order for the dismissal from the army for General Felipe Angeles, Villa's chief artillery officer and adviser in all military affairs.

The other two are the promotion to be major generals of General Pablo Gonzales, commander of the division of the northeast, and General Alvaro Obregon, commander of the division of the west, thus making them superior in rank to General

Rumors that these promotions were to be made were denied last week by Carranza, but it is asserted that the promotions and teh order concerning Angeles were issued by Carranza on Saturday night.

London, July 8.-Freddie Welsh, of Pontypridd, Wales, champion of Great Britain, won the world's lightweight pugilistic championship from Willis Ritchie, of America.

Referee Eugene Corri gave the Bri ton the verdict on points at the end of twenty rounds.

It was a battle between cleverness and ring generalship against strength and gameness, combined with slightly inferior skill, and the former won Welsh knew that he had no chance to win in slugging with the world' champion and wisely adopted other tactics, using a straight left to the face and getting out of danger when Ritchie let go a blow which would have meant a knock-out.

From start to finish the two men used all the cleverness at their com mand, and the spectators were de lighted at their work. Some Americans Ritchie should have received was a draw, but the mass of Britons were crazy with delight when Corri an nounced their man as the winner.

Both men were pretty badly marked up on the face and Ritchie finished much the stronger.

From the outset it was evident tha Ritchie did not want Welsh to pile ut a lead on light points, for the Ameri can carried the battle to his oppon ent and tried to make his superior strength offset the challenger's clever ness. Ritchie was cheered by the American contingent when he reach ed Welsh with hard body blows an the latter became more careful.

In the second round Welsh changed his tactics and got away with the leads before Ritchie could get started with his punches. This enabled Welsh to count frequently, and the roung anier in his sept no tiet During the second tried to hold Welsh with one han and punch with the other, but Referee Eugene Corri warned him that a con tinuance would lead to his disqualifi Ritchie showed his disappointmen over the warning, as he had planned to penetrate Welsh's defense at close with body blows.

In the nineteenth and twentieth rounds the men fought gamely, Ritchie trying for a knockout, but Welsh man aged to save himself by superb box ing. They were battling hard, with Ritchie swinging both hands hard and Welsh using all his cleverness to es cape the damaging blows. The specta tors cheered the two men, who fough hard and fast, but the bell rang with both men on their feet and fighting

Twenty thousand persons paid ad mission to see the bout. It is estimat ed that the gate receipts were $125 00, of which the beaten Ritchie wil receive $40,000. Among the thousands were wome of the British nobility, members of the peerage, statesmen, scientists, lit erary lights and just fight "fans." Among the notables at the rin were Lord Lonsdale, Lord Tweed mouth, Lord Howard and Lord DeWal den. Ida Adams, the actress; John McCormack, the tenor, and John Wan amaker, Jr., were also there.

J. Rufus Wallingford, skillful manipulator of other people's money for his own benefit, meets Benson Falls, idle son of a biroad president, and three equally idle

Wallingford agrees to manage a company to market Benson Falls' patented por able bungalow after Falls drops the et that his father is soon to open a w road through land once obtained from Wallingford at the latter's great financial wford instructs his pal, Blackie w to act as an accomplice in a to bleed the four young men fake orders for the portable

Daw, representing himself as three buyers, orders several hundred houses. Wallingford gets $125,000 cash from the rich quartet for his own patents on the company's output and threatens injunction suits against the company for infringement of other patents.

The company breaks up, and Wallingford and Daw retain 525 portable houses. Wallingford blocks President Falls' railroad scheme and is bought off for $1,250,-000. Wallingford starts on another adventure, with his handy boy, Toad Jessup.

Wallingford buys stock in the Kimberly mine, promoted and operated by the Dougalbobber brothers, and starts a big boom at Dougalville. Meanwhile one of the brothers is trying to sell Blackle Daw Kimberly stock in New York.

Big Bill Slammet is hooted down when he reveals before a Dougalville crowd Wallingford's past in Cinderburg. Wallingford sees how the Dougalbobber brothers stone men out of camp who apply for jobs and recognize the Dougal-bobbers as mine fakers.

Wallingford hires the stoned men as a strong arm gang. He increases his popu-iarity by giving a library to the mining camp. Blackie Daw in New York fails for some of the Kimberly mining stock.

Wallingford's paid job hunters even up past scores by cleaning up the Dougal-bobbers and their strong arm leader. Wallingford stalls off angry stockholders Wallingford and Blackie Daw skip the camp under fire, but clean up $150,000 on houses and lots. Starting a new adventure, they meet Mr. Dillon of the Dillon Department Stores company.

Mrs. Wallingford and Mrs. Daw train Melissa Tripp as dancing star for "The Lama's Goat." The show is to be given at the Avon theater Wallingford and Dawget interested in the event, and Wallingtond sees a way to bleed Dillon. Preparations for the show con-tinue, much to the distress of the women over the amateurishness of Melissa Tripp.

CHAPTER XIII. A Thirty Day Option.

ELISSA TRIPP marched into the library upon the assembled Wallingfords and Daws two evenings later with a letter and a small sheaf of newspaper clippings in her hand. "There's one thing we haven't talked about," she said, interrupting the planning of the great dance scene in the temple. "We baven't made any business arrangements." "Business arrangements?" repeated

Violet in surprise. "I don't quite get you, child. It's going to cost us about $5,000 real money to stage this, and we're responsible for a lot more. But you needn't worry about it." "You don't understand me," returned Melissa. "You're expecting to build the success of this whole dramatic production upon my talent, and what I want to know is, What do I get?" "Somebody ought to tell you," observed Blackie.

"That'll be about all, Blackie," admonished Violet Bonnie. "Remember. she's from Squamosett, and she's our guest. At the same time, you might be right. Why, Melissa, none of us had figured on anything but to give you the total profits."

"But suppose there shouldn't be any?" queried Melissa calmly. "Then we all get the hook," laughed

Violet. "We get it a little worse than you do, to be sure, but we can stand it." "I don't know about that," insisted Melissa. "I've been practicing for three years, and I'm sure of my art. This musical comedy may fail. It may not be the proper setting for my performance, and if it fails after all my labor and all my skill and all my personality I get nothing. Is this fair?"

Violet Bonnie nearly choked. "No." she confessed. "It looks like a scheme to do you; but, believe me, it shan't be done in this house. I'm going to have an extra lock put on your door so that nebody slips in and steals your art. What do you want, a guarantee?"

Something like that," agreed Melissa. "I've just had a letter from Professor Flopsie. He's sent me his collection of what he has read in the papers about musical comedies, and he tells me that nineteen in every twenty fail. Now. I'm just beginning my career, and I must watch out for myself. I think I ought to have a certain guaranteed salary, and then, of course, if the profits go over that so much the better."

Wallingford and Blackle exchanged giances of keen delight, but Violet Bonnie did not pause to exchange

giances with any one. "When I was a kid." she calmly explained. "we had a tramp come to our house and get a square meal, with hot coffee and hot biscuits and all the trimmings, and then he tried to burn

Caruso's or just Tetrazzini's?" "Only what I earn." stated Mellssa modestly. "Professor Flopsie sent me a clipping showing the salaries of prominent dancers. They range from dered into the rehearsals, which soon later he hurried down from the lonely about $250 to $1,000 a week and some. began at the Avon and said, "My I believe, even larger than that. But Gawd, how could they ever cast Tom-I'd be satisfied in the beginning just my Delancy for that part!" or they to take the general average."

the cellaret and handed a bottle and know best, and went away. Friends gently stroking a silk sock. a glass to his wife. She waved away of the "profession" came in and listenthose trifles, being in no need of stim-

"I get you," she told Melissa, "If I wasn't so crazy about my own scenario I would introduce you to the managers. But I'll tell you what we'll do with you. Melissa. We'll fix it so that you don't have to gamble at all. We'll finance this thing ourselves; but, win or lose, we'll guarantee you $50 a week and give you a fourth of the profits above that. I don't like to fuss with a guest, but those are the terms."

"I suppose that for this first engage ment I am compelled to take what you offer me." accepted Melissa, with the air of a martyr. "I reserve the privilege, however, of leaving your production at any moment that I get a better offer. How long an engagement do yon guarantee me?"

"One minute," returned Violet, tearing a piece of insertion out of her gown. "We reserve the right to fire you and get a real dancer any time you don't make good."

"I feel secure in my art," announced Melissa stiffly. "No one can take that from me." And she went to bed,

"If her art was catching they'd quarantine her!" raged Violet. "Is my nose getting red, Fannie?" It was fully five minutes before she was able to join the rest of them in the enjoyment of the funny side of it all, and she was through with it quicker.

"Everybody says I have a sweet disposition," she explained, "and I know I have: but, honest to Christmas, folks, this Flopsie academy graduate has me strangling feather pillows in the night and calling them Melissa! There's one thing sure, though-she's fixed it so I have to make this goat piece win or die of apoplexy. Now, we'll all four chip in and become producers in earn-

"You'll have to count me out," declared Wallingford. "I've just made a bet with Blackie that I won't go into any money making scheme for six months."

"Maybe this isn't," suggested Mrs. Wallingford with a smile.

"Oh, Fannie!" protested Violet, really hurt. "I didn't think you'd go back on me.'

"I haven't," returned Mrs. Wallingford, still smiling. "To prove that, Violet, I suggest that you and I finance this thing ourselves, leaving the men entirely out of it, except as business agents and errand boys."

"That's the idea!" agreed Violet. highly delighted.

That was the idea that remained. Wallingford saw to it that the Avon theater, sadly run down, was put in proper condition for the play, and he attended to all the necessary business while Blackie put in his time and ingenuity devising wonderful dispatches from St. Petersburg concerning the great dancer Lhaa! She was missing from the temple at Lhasa. The lama was offering fabulous rewards for her dead or alive, for she knew all the horrid mysteries of the temple. She was rumored to have been seen in every capital of Europe and Asia. She was definitely located in St. Petersburg. The Russian government, captivated by her marvelous beauty, would not turn her over to the lama to be beheaded, and war was startlingly imminent. She was finally on her way to America. Later.-She had been secured by the enterprising managers of The Lama's Goat" to dance Lhasa's most jealously guarded sacred ceremonial in that stupendous forthcoming production. It was great "stuff," and the papers printed some of it.

In the meantime the Daw residence was the scene of at least equal activity. The Wallingfords moved over to the Daw residence bag and baggage and took possession of the colonial suit. Dicky Dolger, being found homeless and forlorn by Blackie down on the Bowery, was pushed by the shoulders through a Turkish bath and a barber shop into some clean linen and a new suit of clothes, trundled out to the house and installed in the "umpire" room, where the cellaret was most scantily stocked, but replenished at judicious though regular interval. Rickets Johnson went home of nights along in the wee small hours when he felt like it and was given the Tudor room because the window mullions and other vertical decorations reminded him of a pipe organ. The renaissance music room, in which a mechanical organ, an electrical piano, a bird's eye maple phonograph and an automatic guitar had been installed. was turned into a rehearsal hall, and here, while Dicky Dolger culled nosegays of wit from vast sheaves of dead and bygone librettos to adorn the plot of "The Lama's Goat" and Rickets Johnson "adapted" the hit numbers of all the successful musical productions since "Pinafore" and Blackie and Wal-assistance of Mrs. Wallingford, took up Melissa Tripp as a lump of raw material and molded upon ber the "Dance of the Sacred Goat." Attired in a short skirt made from an early spring chiffon, which had been ruthlessly cut off at the knees. Violet danced and postured and explained and did it all over again from midafternoon to dewy morn and enjoyed almost killing her constantly complain-agers of other houses came in and yawned and said: "Why, look who's here! Dicky Dolger and Rickets Johnson, the pair that never came back Well, order the hearse!" and chuckled and went away.

After all this criticism upon the part of the experts in the game the piece was bound to be a stupendous success. and Business Manager Wallingford was so certain of it that during the last week of the rehearsals he went back into the lonely corner where Dan Sickels always sat in gloomy apathy. "Well, Dan, what do you think of the piece?" he inquired. Dan tried to force a smile, "You never can tell. It's all a gamble. Nobody knows," he said.

"You're entitled to a guess," Wallingford insisted. "Come on, Dan, tell me honestly, what do you think about it?"

"Well, I don't like to hurt your feel ings." Sickels hesitated. "I haven't any," Wallingford promptly informed him.

"Well, if you leave it to me, I don't think it's any kind of a musical comedy, anyhow. None of the boys thinks so. You see, Wallingford, you got in wrong from the start. You got Dicky Dolger's and Rickets Johnson's names tacked on the program, and you're un lucky in your cast. Delancy and Lawrence and Devoe are all right, but they haven't had decent parts for three seasons, so what can you expect? Violet Bonnie hasn't been in touch with the game for a long time. Then again this is the hoodooed Avon. It looks like you're up against it, Wallingford.' "It isn't my funeral," returned J. Rufus. "I'm not engaging in any business this year, anyhow, but I still have a bet left in me. If 'The Lama's Goat' makes a hit it'll break the hoodoo, and this house will be worth more than it is today. At what price will you sell the property, and how much will you take for a thirty day option on it?"

"It looks like you're up against it Wallingford."

Dan sank back in his chair like collapsed puffball. "It's too late," he huskily whispered; then he cleared his throat. "It's too late," he repeated in a louder huskiness. "I gave Dillon a thirty day option day before yester-

"The devil you say!" exclaimed Wallingford, deeply disappointed. "Why. the man's as crooked as Tammany and a sure bankrupt if he goes through with this thing. I thought you had decided not to fuss up with him."

"I couldn't help myself," half whined Sickels, in the pitiable weakness of a once strong man. "Wallingford, I've been broke so long that when I see any of my old friends on the street I hunt an alley. I used to be one of the best dressers on Broadway, and now I don't like to go out there in the sunlight; I feel as if everybody that's walking behind me has his eyes focused on the fringe of my pants. I own this property and its $85,000 worth of mortgages, but there's many a time I've felt like trading it for the price of a new suit of clothes, a dinner with a pretty girl, a skin full of champagne and a bottle of prussic acid. Well. when I'm feeling about like that this quivering Dillon comes along and shows me twenty-five greenbacks, each one of them good for $20 at any regularly licensed bar, and I fall. He of fers me $100,000 cash and the same amount in stock of the Dillon Stores company for this place, if he chooses on or before the day his option expires. But it isn't the figure he offers me that gets me; it's that visible $500 in real money. Say, do you know what I've got on now for the first time in a century or so? Silk socks!"

"I'm sorry you closed with him Dan," commented Wallingford, too much interested in the business end of it to pay any attention to Dan's joy in the sordid necessities of life. "All you'll get out of this place will be the $15,000 difference between the cash gages." And Wallingford stalked away, steadfastly refusing Sickels' hospitable invitation to go out and take a drink

"You might as well have some more haberdashery, Dan," Wallingford observed, laying a hundred dollar bill across the glistening ankle.

Dan promptly clutched the gaudy trifle in his fingers. "What's it for? he asked quite naturally.

CURED BY MONKEY'S GLAND.

A Cretin Turned Into a Quick Witted Boy-Operation Unique.

The radical cure of a cretin-one suffering from cretinism, a disease char acterized by physical deformity and imbecility-by grafting the thyroid gland of a monkey was described at the Academy of Medicine in Paris by Dr. Voronoff, a well known surgeon.

The patient, a child of fourteen years, was attacked by mysoedema at the age of eight as an after effect of scarlet fever. His physical and intel lectual growth stopped. Six mouths ago Dr. Voronoff, in the presence of nineteen doctors, grafted on the child's neck the right lobe of the thyroid gland of a large baboon.

Almost immediately the patient be gan to improve, and marked develop ment took place in body and mind While previously the patient was apa thetic and stupid be became active and quick witted.

Members of the academy conside the operation of great importance and tending to confirm the great possibili tles of constructive surgery as intro duced by Dr. Alexis Carrel.

TELLS OF THREAT TO KILL CARMAN

Many Know Woman Who Said She Would Murder Him.

HOWE PREVENTED

Philadelphian Describes Scene Threat to Kill Doctor "If It Took a Lifetime."

Philadelphia, July 8.—Some hitherto unknown phase in the life of Dr. Ed win Carman may have had something to do with the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey. This is indicated by the nar rative told in this city by John Howe formerly of Freeport, L. I.

"I know all the persons connected with the tragedy," he said, "for I lived for years in Freeport, not far from Dr. Carman's office.

"In the summer of 1912 I invited party of friends from Philadelphia to go with me on a cruise in Great Sout? Bay, L. I. I will not say who those friends were, for they did not appear When they did not turn up, I asked a Freeport man and his wife to go wit me, and they accepted. I will not give their names, for the authorities are the proper ones to give that informa tion. They know who the woman is.

"We went out in my boat and land ed on an island. There we ran across Davis Kennedy and Dr. Carman, both of Freeport. I knew them both. The moment we spied them, the woman in our party screamed and turned and ran back to the boat.

"Her husband remained where he was, surprised by his wife's action. ran to the boat after her and foun her cowering on a seat in the cabin and in hysterics. She was screamins at the top of her voice: 'I'm going to kill him if it takes a life time.'

"She picked up a paper knife shape like a dagger and started to leave the boat. I caught hold of her and held her back and asked whom she meant. 'Dr. Carman,' she said, and her voice fairly quivered with hate. said: 'Nonsense, You're nervous and you don't know what you're talking about. Come on ashere and let's ge this thing explained.' OLD RUSSIAN CHURCH COLLAR "MAKES" THE GOWN

Interesting Ruins Found at Fort Ross, California.

Structure Was Built by Members of Russian-American Fur Company Expedition in 1813 and Used for Place of Worship.

San Francisco.-At Fort Ross, California, some fifty miles north of San Francisco, there are the very interesting remains of what was once a church of the Holy Orthodox religion-as the members of the Eastern or Greek church call their faith. It was in 1809 that an expedition of the Russian-American Fur company came south from Sitka, and made a settlement at Bodega bay, which they called Port Rumiantsof. Two years later they chose a position for their main post little beyond the Russian river, which they called the Slavianka. At this point, which they named Ros, or Rus, they built a fort with watchtowers and mounted 40 cannon.

The settlement was ostensibly only reason, however, in the character of for a post of such strength, and it of gowns or blouses attractive. seems probable that the company intended to hold the territory as a Russian colony, and by gradual settlement farther south, to offer an effective challenge to the claims of Spain to the coast region north of San Francisco. The fort was built of heavy redwood timbers. It was about one hundred yards square, and contained the quarters of the officers and men, workshops, warehouses, granaries, a windmill, and, of course, bathhouses. The population varied between two hundred and four hundred, inclusive of some Aleuts who were employed in the sealing and sea-otter industry. The fur business grew to be large and very profitable. Sir George Simpson, the governor of the Hudson Bay company, who visited Fort Ross in 1841, reported that up to that time no less than eighty thousand sea-otter skins alone had been taken and marketed by the Russian-American company. In 1813 the Russians built a church, and there the gorgeous ritual of the Greek Catholic church was conducted until the close of the Russian occupation.

That came in 1842. There was constant friction between the Russians and the Spanish and Mexican governments. In 1824 the Russian government bound itself, by the treaty of London, not to acquire territory on the Pacific coast south of 54 degrees 40 minutes latitude. So there was nothing for the fur company to do but to seek a purchaser for the settlement. After the Hudson Bay company had in 1840 to "Captain" Sutter, who lives in California history as the owner of Sutter's mill, where gold was first discovered in 1848. He paid $30,000 for the buildings and other effects at Fort Ross and four smaller settlements in the neighborhood. In 1842 the Russians sailed away for Sitka. Four years later California passed from Mexico to the United States.

There are few relics of the Russian occupation still to be seen at Fort Ross. The commandant's house still stands, and parts of the stockade can yet be seen. The church was in fair condition until the great earthquake of 1906, which threw the roof, with its quaint cupola and belfry, to the ground. But even then the massive timbers, fastened with hand-wrought bolts and spikes, held together.

BUGS PAINTED ON CHEEKS

Birds and Beetles in Natural Colors Adorn the Faces of Paris Beauties.

Paris. - Designs painted on the cheeks are the latest barbarous eccenon the battleship Vermont, in Vera tricity indulged in by Parislennes, which is ousting the colored wigs.

Fashioned in Short Time by Clever Woman.

A clever collar is made of lace that is merely graduated into shape when sewn on the bodice, while a few small wires at the back of the neck hold it in place. This is a very easy style to copy, though it must not be confounded with the real medici, which is IF A WIFE REFUSES HER SMILES more elaborate, and needs to be completed with sharp corners.

Other collars are made of soft white silk or satin, very much like those seen in the old paintings of Lord

Only these are slightly more exaggerated in style than the Byron collar of a few months ago. Many of these have a wire run in on either collar, and give that pretty "winged" effect which is so immensely becoming to many people. For summer wear there will be all kinds of muslin about twenty miles farther north, a and embroidered neckwear, but on the whole the severe modes, after the oldfashioned Quaker and Puritan designs, will be most seen.

Any one with clever fingers is able to manufacture for herself the daintiest and most charming confections a peaceful trading post and a center of this sort with very little expendifor sealing operations. On Dainty Aprons.

On dainty aprons it is well to sev beading instead of the regulation binding and strings. This beading should be about an inch in width, and wash ribbon should be run through it. This ribbon serves for strings, and at the same time lends to the beauty of the apron. The ribbon can be slipped out when the apron is soiled. It can then be pressed out, freshened up and replaced when the apron has returned snow white from a visit to the tab.

A note beating these words was found by cracksmen when they entered the plumbing establishment of Pahl & Henry, in the business district. They followed directions and made away with $8.50.

"There's no sense in having a $300 safe wrecked when there is only $8.50 in it," a member of the firm explained subsequently.

Dangerous Hiccoughs.

Two unusual cases of suffering through hiccoughs are reported. In one, a man had an attack of hiccoughs which lasted for nine days before he obtained relief. A little girl had a much worse attack, which lasted between three and four months, and was the result of a fright. Doctors had been unable to end the paroxysms, and many times it was thought the child would die. She had wasted away alarmingly, and hope for her recovery was abandoned But a short time ago she had a violent attack of coughing. Her mother gave her cold tea and lemon. The coughing stopped. Everybody waited anxiously expecting the hiccoughing to return. But it did not.

Laura Jean Libbey's Talks on Heart Topics

Nor do they trust their tongues alone, But speak a language of their own: an read a nod, a shrug, a look, Far better than a printed book; Convey a libel in a frown

And wink a reputation down.

The success of marriage depends largely upon the view each takes of being companionable after the newness of the honeymoon has worn off. The bride with a will of her own remembers the well-meant advice of some of the old aunties of the neighborhood: "You must begin as you mean to end, my dear! One or the other will be boss in the home. Some young husbands will be only too glad to give the reins into the wife's hands. There are others not so docile."

Foolish is the bride who acts on the advice of others. No two husbands are alike. The bride who expects her young husband to hand over every cent of his wages from the start may run against the first rock of disaster to her matrimonial bark. The man who is not used to having a woman run his pocketbook may demur. He is eager to do what is right by her. After much discussion he signifies bis willingness to give her the greater part of his salary, but insists firmly upon withholding a small part of it each week-assuring her that he is making good use of the money in his own way, but putting her off evasively when she insists upon knowing just what it is being used for. She accuses him of drinking or smoking on the sly, accusations which he indignantly denies.

The first cloud appears on the horizon of their married life when he discovers his bride has a temper. He comes home after a hard day's work, to meet a wife who has no smile for him. Instead, she frowns and answers him in monosyllables. So it continues. The home he imagined was to be an earthly paradise turns out to be so dreary an abode that he had rather turn his face anywhere than there. It's a man's nature to look for sympathy wherever he can He generally turns to some with a smile such as this woman has in his home. The young wife is high spirited and will not give in. When the husband has a like disposition, matters grow from bad to worse.

mistrust of him regarding the small amount he holds back. From the time the wife takes the stand that she will be cold to him and he will be glad to yield to her will the outside influence strengthens; proves a powerful magnetic foe to the wife's happiness. Husbands and wives should make ip their minds to have no secrets from each other. A wife should consider her husband's privilege by not insisting on having every cent in his pay envelope as long as he confides to her what good use he puts it to. He may have an aged, needy relative to whom he gives the money. It would be much cheaper for him to bring his old relative to his home and care for her there. But he considers it might not meet with her aprpoval. He does not wish to put care on her young shoulders. Unless a wife is sure her husband is spending his money foolishly, she should not begrudge him the few dollars he earns himself. A wife's smile is the sunshine of life, her frown its cloud.

MACHINE BESTS MEN AT CHESS

Device That Protests When Human Opponent Cheats.

IT HAS SENSITIVE ORGANS.

Automatic Apparatus Constructed So That Competitor Is Obliged to Play Strictly According to Rules of the Game-When These Are Violated Lighted Lamp Gives Warning.

Is the day near at hand when science will be able to create a human being? This question may well be asked when one considers the latest invention of that king of automat inventors Senor Torres y Quevedo, member of the Spanish Academy of Sciences. Senor Torres caused a sensation some thirty years ago by inventing a machine which would solve algebraic equations. Then he invented a balloon which speed as great as the fastest Zeppelins.

The latest product of this wonderful aboratory, says a Paris dispatch to the New York Sun, is a machine which plays chess and which seems actually to accomplish the work of a human brain. Senor Torres thus describes his own invention:

"It is true that the game which the automat plays is not very complicated. but, nevertheless, for its opponent to win he must know how to play. The automat uses the white king against the castle and the black king. Its follow a certain course which leads it up to the finish.

On the Watch For Fraud.

"When the automat's opponent moves the black king the automat begins by seeing if the movement conforms with the rules of the game. If not it protests by lighting a lamp. If the move is according to the rules the automat, taking into account the position of the three pieces, decides what is the best move and then makes it. Thus the game continues until the automat has checkmated the black king.

"If the automat's opponent should make a mistake, as I said before, the automat protests by lighting a lamp But it will tolerate only three mistakes o Then all its lights go out and you may move your pieces as much as you want-the westomat has finished: If you wish to begin a new game you invite the automat by a special movement to play another game salf it race cepts it will turn out all its lights, place its pieces on the board in their original positions, then wait for you to make the first move.

"The old automats, the most cele brated of which were those of Vaucanson, imitated the appearance and the movements of man. Today this idea has been abandoned, and intricate machines, which look like nothing but machines, have taken their places, The self directing torpedo is a good example of an antompta Therdifficulty does not lie ili-the work of its belmsmag. but in the determination of the movement to be executed. The machine de duces this movement from indicators by purely mechanical means. This, as in the calculating machines, is the brainwork of the man that the machine accomplishes.

Sensitive Mechanism.

"It is not to be denied that automats can have sensitive organs (monometers, thermometers, compasses, etc.,) permitting them to recognize the circumstances which determine their movements, but science refuses to admit that they can possess the analogue of a brain. But I believe I have shown that this possibility theoretically does not offer the least doubt. Automats can be made as complicated as one may

"I believe that there is no limit in this domain and that theoretically at least the time will come when all factory operations, even those which demand the intervention of engineers, can be executed automatically."

Rings Bell to Keep the Crows Away. In order to keep the crows away Cyrus Dunham of Skowhegan, Me., has hung a bell in an apple tree close to the cornfield and attached a string to It that runs to the house through his bedroom window. In the morning. about daybreak, when the crows begin to visit the field, Dunham pulls the string, and the result is satisfactory.
